Reflection and future Aspirations

Durin the final seven weeks of the course, I truly enjoyed every assignment; I was being prepared not only academically but also spiritually for the challenges that lie ahead. Creating a professional and spiritual portfolio helped me gain insight into myself my achievements, aspirations, and the principles and values I have learned throughout my career as an accountant and in the IT career I am now beginning. It helped me understand the kind of professionals the Lord expects us to be: individuals with sound principles and values, capable of acting and working honestly in any future assignments or jobs.

One of my current aspirations regarding the portfolio I created is to refine certain details so that, when the opportunity for a job interview or application arises, I can submit it and make a strong impression. I feel much more confident about submitting my resume now, having learned what is essential for securing and interview. My second aspiration is to continue enhancing my portfolio with new elements such as completed courses and new projects and to expand my collection of materials ensuring the portfolio is competitive and ready for any requirements. Another goal is to complete my degree within the short term in one year and earn a second professional qualification in Information Technology. I know there are challenges and obstacles ahead, but I have faith and hope that, through study and diligence, anything is possible; we are often our own greatest obstacles to overcome. This course has greatly nurtured my future aspirations and goals.
